Report of Education Department Official to Council of Public Instruction Occasions Unusual Step

THE School Board at Nixon Creek, Cowichan Lake district, has been superseded by Inspector A. C. Stewart, who was yesterday appointed official trustee of the school by the Council of Public Instruction.

This action follows the investigation of the death of Miss Mabel Jones, the teacher, by the coroner's jury. Prompt action was taken in the matter following receiving the report relative to the matter by the Minister of Education, Hon. J. Hinchliffe.

When the inquest into the death of the young teacher was ordered, the Minister of Education at once appointed Inspector May, of the Educational Department, to attend the proceedings and to report on the situation.

Yesterday the inspector placed the result of the inquest before the Council of Public Instruction, and related the evidence taken, as already reported in The Colonist.

On this report action was immediately taken, and acting under the authority which is delegated to the Council of Public Instruction the replacement of the existing Board of School Trustees was ordered, and Inspector Stewart was named to take over the duties of administering the affairs there as official trustee.

Cement Monopoly Alleged to Exist; Denial Is Made

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—The charge that a monopoly exists among Canadian cement producers was made before the Tariff Advisory Board this afternoon by A. E. Darby, representing the Canadian Council of Agriculture. Emphatic denial of the allegation was immediately made by Prof. G. Jackson, acting for the Canada Cement Co. Mr. Darby made his charge on the second hearing of the application of the council for the removal of the duty on cement entering the Dominion.

BLAST WRECKS ARMS FACTORY; SEVEN KILLED

Five Reported Missing and Twenty-One Injured—Concussion Shakes Outlying Sections of Paris

FRENCH PREMIER RUSHES TO SCENE

PARIS, Nov. 20.—With a roar that was heard for miles, a factory devoted exclusively to the manufacture of cartridges for French army rifles, blew up in Vincennes, just outside the southwestern boundary of Paris, late this afternoon. Six hours after the accident, seven were known dead, five were reported missing, and twenty-one persons, including four women, were injured.

The concussion shook the western suburbs and outlying sections of the capital, and brought Raymond Poincare, Paul Painleve, Minister of War, and Andre Tardieu, Minister of the Interior, rushing to the scene. They took charge of the rescue work, and of the investigation that was started. Their arrival also had the effect of silencing minor officials, and made it impossible for anyone to cause the disaster.

Four hours after the explosion firemen had the flames under control.

LITTLE HOPE FOR MISSING

Two hours later soldiers had discovered four bodies, and others were known to be under the wreckage. There was little hope for the safety of the five missing workmen.

FLOOD WATERS ARE RECEDING

RELIEF ACTIVITIES BEGIN IN KANSAS, MISSOURI AND OKLAHOMA

Reports of Suffering and Devastation Stimulate Activities—Plane to Drop Food

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 20.—As the flood waters of Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma continued to recede today, two more dead were added to the toll of flood victims and reports of suffering and devastation wrought by the high water, stimulated relief activities in the three States. The flooding today of the body of Charles Culbertson, farm hand, who disappeared while doing rescue work at Winfield, Kas., and the drowning late this afternoon of James Daren, fifty-seven, Liberal, Mo., while removing debris from a railroad bridge over the Neosho River at Winfield, Kas., brought to sixteen the known death toll.

Bodies of two victims of the flood of the Morais des Cygnes River were recovered at Ottawa, Kas., late today.

As the waters of the swollen river receded, relief workers found the bodies of Dr. J. Ward Smith, a retired dentist, and Marcene H. Jones, twelve, daughter of Mrs. C. C. Jones. Mrs. Jones, her two daughters, Dr. Smith and Dr. Ralph Shiras, drowned Saturday when a motorboat capsized in a whirlpool. The body of Dr. Shiras was found late Saturday, but the bodies of Mrs. Jones and her daughter, Doris Jean, had not been found tonight.

AIRPLANE DROPS FOOD

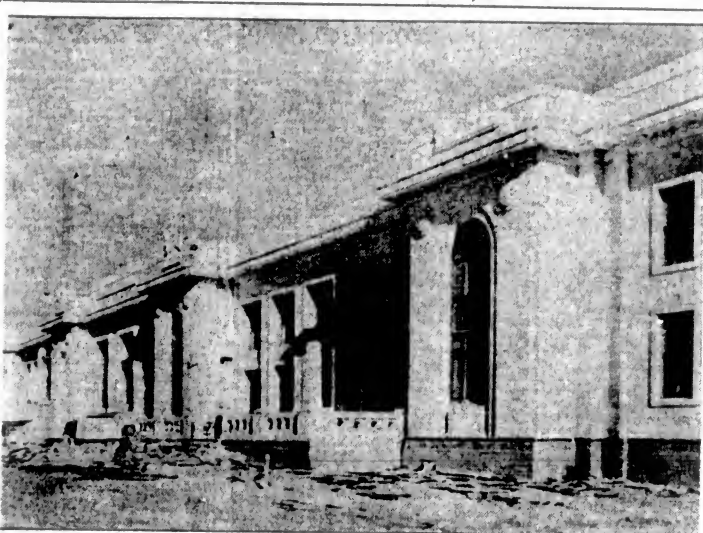

An airplane was dispatched from here late today by the National Air Transport, Inc., to drop food on an island in the Morais des Cygnes River, near Pleasanton, Kas., where six hunters have been marooned since the flood of last Saturday.

With several thousand persons homeless and destitute from the force of the torrent that roared down, overflowing rivers, sweeping bridges, homes, and all that stood in its path to destruction, the Red Cross and other relief agencies made extensive preparations today for the rehabilitation of the flood areas.

General B. Booth Better

LONDON, Nov. 20.—General Bramwell Booth had a quiet day and showed slight improvement tonight. The medical bulletin issued by headquarters of the Salvation Army said, however, that the aged commander was not yet out of danger.

F. F. FLETCHER CONVICTED BY ASSIZE JURY

Found Guilty of Unlawfully Wounding William Canning, With Intent to Do Grievous Bodily Harm

SENTENCE TO BE IMPOSED LATER

After deliberating for one hour and twenty minutes, a petit jury at the Criminal Assizes yesterday afternoon brought in a verdict against Freeman Frederick Fletcher of guilty of wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm. Fletcher was tried on a charge of attempting to murder William Canning, of Vancouver, resulting from a stabbing affray which occurred on board the Ss. Princess Adelaide en route from Victoria to Vancouver, on Sunday morning, August 26, 1928.

Mr. Justice W. A. Macdonald reserved the passing of sentence upon Fletcher until later in the Assizes.

Joseph Haig will go on trial this morning at the Assizes at the Court House at 10 o'clock on a charge of wilfully damaging on October 31, 1928, an automobile at Victoria, the property of George Mason. Mr. William C. Moreby, K.C., will be defence prosecutor, and Mr. Stuart Henderson will conduct Haig's defence.

FLETCHER'S STORY

That he had never used a knife on William Canning in the light on the deck of the Princess Adelaide when the stabbing affray occurred, was the testimony given by Freeman Frederick Fletcher, when he took the stand in his own defence at the Assizes yesterday. Fletcher told the court that the eleven wounds which a knife in Canning's own hand as witness, were caused by the knife.

Blast Drives Iron Through Wall of Brick

GLACE BAY, Nov. 20.—Three men were injured today at Number Two Colliery of the Dominion Coal Co. when one of a battery of twenty-one boilers blew up without warning, endangering the lives of a dozen employees and causing thousands of dollars of damage. A section of the boiler weighing two and a half tons was hurled through a section of the steel guards, then through a twelve-inch brick wall into the compressor house, a distance of seventy feet. The injured, A. McAdam, Jack Frost and Archie Johnson. An investigation has been ordered.

New Weiler Building Sold to Sprott-Shaw Schools and Terry's

THE new Weiler Building, situated on the northwest corner of Douglas and Broughton Streets, has been sold to Sprott-Shaw Schools and Terry's Drug Store. Confirmation of this deal was given last night. Mr. C. E. V. Bagshaw, business property manager for Pemberton & Sons.

This property has a Douglas Street frontage of ninety-four feet and a Broughton Street frontage of 111 feet. It is valued by the assessor at $90,000. No mention has been made of the price paid by the purchasers of this block, which was owned by Mr. Otto Weiler, of the Weiler furniture store, although the complete property cost the builders nearly $140,000.

BUILT IN 1921

The Weiler Block was built in 1921 and its sale is considered as one of the most important real estate deals put through this year. There has been a brisk sale of downtown property this year. Among the more important deals were the transfer of the Denare property, which has 120 feet frontage on Douglas Street and 120 feet frontage on Johnson Street, taking in the southwest corner, the Jewell Block, on the southwest corner of Douglas and Yates Streets, which has been bought by the Metropolitan Chain Store, Limited, the old Royal Hotel, on the southeast corner of Port and Broad Streets, which was bought by R. F. Castle & Company; the southeast corner of Vancouver and Port Streets, to Mr. Harry Leach and Mr. R. F. Hayden, of California, who will construct a public market here; the Mahon Block on the west side of Government Street, between Port and View Streets, to Mr. Fred Spencer, of the General Warehouse, Limited, and the Mount Douglas Apartments to a client of Pemberton & Sons.

MR. CHURCHILL ASSAILS LABOR

ASKS IF MEN WHO MANAGED GENERAL STRIKE TO BECOME MINISTERS

Former Labor Minister Replies—Lack of Appealing Policy Is Suggested

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The general strike of 1926 has been through in a very offhand way by Mr. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer. Speaking in Essex, he declared the question in the next election would be whether the men who managed the general strike were going to be His Majesty's ministers, referring to the trade union congress heads.

Mr. J. H. Thomas, former Labor minister, and now general secretary of the Railwaymen's Union, retorted: "The Chancellor considers there is not enough ginger in the safeguarding and deterring proposals, so he proposes to take up as an election issue the general strike."

ARMED FORCES NUMBER LESS THAN IN 1914

Premier Baldwin Tells Commons Enlisted Men in All Forces Now One-Third Fewer Than Before War

FIGURES SHOW DROP 940,000 TO 674,000

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Premier Baldwin told the House today that Great Britain's armed forces number nearly one-third less than in 1914. Replying to a questioner, the Premier said that it was extremely difficult to give precise figures which would reflect adequately the strength of the Crown's forces at the two dates because of changes in the intervening fourteen years, particularly as to the development of the Air Force as a separate arm.

As far as it could be gauged, however, the figures were 940,000 in 1914 and 674,000 in 1928. These figures, he said, covered all forces, including the reserves and auxiliary forces, for which provision was made in the budget estimates.

LEADERS OF NEWSPRINT INDUSTRY GATHER IN MONTREAL CONFERENCE

Effort to End Chaotic Conditions Is Spurred on by Warning From Ontario Premier

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—While no official statement was issued it was thought that the question of amalgamation of the newsprint industry, of which practically nothing was said yesterday, was being discussed at an informal gathering of several of the leaders of the newsprint industry here today.

Those attending the meeting, of which practically nothing was said yesterday, included J. H. Gundy and A. R. Wood, of Wood Gundy & Company, Alex. Smith, New York, representing the Albitri Paper Company, F. W. Backus, Minneapolis, who is interested in mills in Western Ontario, and J. Rye Harbor Buries Men In One Grave

RYE HARBOR, Sussex, Nov. 20.—This was a village of mourning today. The community joined in a funeral for the seventeen victims of the lifeboat tragedy last Thursday. Fifteen of the men were buried in one big grave under a spreading yew tree within sound of the waves, under which the bodies of their other two comrades rested.

Every shop in the village was closed and every blind was drawn as the procession bore fifteen coffins covered with Union Jacks and followed by weeping women and relatives, to the churchyard.

Rosetta Annetts, Aged Nine, and Eight Other Children Are Alone in Farm-house Near Vermilion, Alberta, When Fire Breaks Out—Parents Are Absent

Little Girl Goes Through Flaming House Six Times

Would Have Saved All of Other Children But Four-Year-Old Persisted in Going Back Into House—Brought Back Twice—Third Time Rescue Impossible

EDMONTON, Nov. 20.—The heroism of nine-year old Rosetta Annetts saved from fire and exposure the lives of herself and seven other children out of eight, when in the absence of adults their farm home south of Vermilion was burned to the ground Saturday night last. Six times, while smoke and flames filled the kitchen of the house, did the little girl make her lone trip up and down the stairs. At the sixth attempt the paint on the stairs was bubbling with heat and the child's throat was raw and choking with smoke.

Rosetta would have saved all the children had not four-year-old Barbara Rennie persisted in returning to the burning house. Three times the little one went back; twice Rosetta carried her out to safety. The third time the house was so badly filled with smoke that the child could not be rescued; her charred body was found in the ruins of the house after the fire had died down.

The home was that of Alexander Rennie, soldier settler occupant, separated from his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Annetts lived with Rennie, the little heroine being their daughter.

Survivor Angry At Press Report Imputed to Him

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Captain Frederick Sorenson, a ship's officer, who was a second class passenger on the ill-fated Vestris, testified today at the Federal Department of Commerce inquiry and declared nothing on the ship indicated an imperfect inspection. His testimony was given after two United States Government inspectors had denied vigorously charges that they were drunk while making inspection, five days before the ship sank. Captain Sorenson had been credited in a local paper as blaming the Vestris officers, and especially Captain William Carey, for the disaster. Today he characterized as a "disgrace" the manner in which reporters had twisted the story given on his arrival aboard a rescue ship.

CANDIDATE IS READY TO AID IN EXPANSION

Conservative Member for Skeena Federal Riding Appeals for Mr. D. B. Plunkett, Local Candidate

THREE MINISTERS OF B.C. SPEAK

Before a gathering that filled Shelbourne Hall last evening, Mr. D. B. Plunkett, the Conservative candidate at the coming by-election, made it clear that when elected he would give attention to the needs of the city, and the whole of the riding. He would be ready to listen to all their representations and to the requests of the various bodies interested.

In this connection Mr. Plunkett read the letter which he had received from the industrial committee of the City Council, and which he said indicated that that body seemed to have little doubt of him going to Ottawa. The letter was as follows:

Mr. D. B. Plunkett
2519 Rock Bay Avenue
Victoria, B.C.

Dear Sir:—I am directed by the industrial committee of the City Council to forward for your information the attached copy of requests that have been made to the Dominion Government for certain improvements to be carried out at Ogden Point Docks.

It is hoped that you will lend your support to the City Council's endeavor to improve the shipping facilities of the port. We are writing a similar letter to Dr. J. D. MacLean.

We are preparing a plan on which we have marked the various improvements being asked for, and shall let you have a copy of same as soon as possible.

(Signed) Secretary Industrial Committee

Mr. Plunkett made an appeal for support on election day.

MR. J. C. BRADY

Mr. J. C. Brady, M.P., said that in supporting Mr. Plunkett they were paying tribute to the great party to which he belonged, tribute to that great leader, Mr. Bennett, who has vision of a high order, such as Canada demanded today.

He had known Dr. MacLean for sixteen years. He had nothing to say against him as a gentleman.

The effect of the vote to be cast would not affect Victoria only, but it would have its effect in a wider field.

He recalled that only a few months ago Victoria defeated Dr. MacLean and his party as did the rest of British Columbia.

"Why did the electorate do it?" "Because it felt that it was for the benefit of British Columbia that a change should be made."

"The inevitable hour is coming, faster than we realize, that we are nearer the point where, if we do not buckle on our armor and defend our natural birthright, we shall find ourselves completely monopolized by the United States," said Mr. Brady, in making a plea for the protection of industries.

In this connection he cited the cement industry. He recalled that in 1908 the cement factory was established here in Victoria by Mr. R. P. Butchart. The business developed until it became necessary to increase the output by the construction of the Hamerton mill by another company. The war followed with its upsetting of things, but following it the situation was beginning to change when the Liberal party came into power.

Now as a result of the situation there was a fight being put up at Ottawa before the Tariff Commission for the existence of the cement industry in this country.

Dr. MacLean was announcing that the issue in the present contest was purely local. "This has been the curse of the Liberal party. They have been extremely local."

The Conservative policies were altogether different. They were first and foremost national in character.

TARIFF QUESTION

The British Empire was not built on policies like that advocated by Dr. MacLean, that of voting to get something for Victoria.

Dr. MacLean said that the tariff was not an issue in the election. Mr. Brady said that the late United States election had shown that the tariff was the great issue there. The United States had been built up on protection. It had grown into wealth on protection and the people of that country knew it.

"What is happening to Canada today?" asked Mr. Brady.

He went on to say that, following the boundary line, they could find the industries in Canada being strangled. In this connection he referred to Moncton, N.B.

The speaker denied that the Conservatives were against the Australian treaty. Had it not been for the Conservatives the treaty would not be in force. All that they were opposed to was any clause that would kill or strangle the agricultural industry in this country. When it was found that dumping was doing this, the Conservatives wanted this righted.

Referring to the remarks about a "friendly Government," Mr. Brady asked:

"Was the development of our ports a thing to be kept back until a friendly Government was elected?" The Conservative party stood on the broad platform of the good of all and not the few.

In its following of local issues the Liberal Government at Ottawa was playing to one-sixth of the population, as represented in the wheat growers of the Prairies and sacrificing the interests of five-sixths in the other parts of the Dominion.

There was a new call to arms today and this was to make Canada and keep her for Canadians, said he. He contended that if Victoria, after the example set on July 18, for sentimental reasons voted opposite to that, it would be striking a blow at the democratic vote.

Mr. Brady was given loud applause as he sat down.

MR. MATLAND

"Hon. S. F. Tolmie heard a call to devote his life to his native province," said Hon. R. L. Matland, explaining reasons for the by-election. It was no compliment to Dr. Tolmie, he said, to elect other than a Conservative in this election, he said.

It was a familiar thing to have Dr. MacLean taking part in a by-election in the province, as he recalled the list of by-elections in which such notorious bids were made for power by Dr. MacLean as a member of the Provincial Government.

Dr. MacLean was at his old tricks of making promises and not keeping them. Dr. MacLean could not promise a single thing in the way of port development, because there was not a cent set apart for it.

Nothing could stop the development of the ports of the Pacific Coast. He called upon Dr. MacLean and the members of the Liberal Government at Ottawa to come out in an honest way and announce themselves in favor of port development for the whole Pacific Coast.

U.S. TARIFF WALL

The United States had first gone through a campaign in which it was made clear that the tariff wall of that country was to be raised higher, with no regard for the industry or the working men of any other country, but only having regard to the working men and the industries of the United States.

Never was the need of protecting Canadian farming and Canadian industry greater than at the present time. No one knew better than Dr. MacLean that the prosperity of the country depended upon adequate protection for Canada.

A message was needed to be sent to Ottawa that Canada demand protection for its industry now that Mr. Hoover announced a higher tariff. From nowhere could this come with greater force than from the capital city of British Columbia.

MR. POOLEY

Hon. R. L. Pooley stressed the importance of the by-election, the first in Canada since the presidential election in the United States, when Mr. Hoover won the vote by promising higher protection for the farmers of the Middle States.

Mr. Pooley wished to know what Dr. MacLean would do at Ottawa if he were elected to the House of Commons, if the question arose of protecting poultry, farm products and fruit.

Mr. Pooley then read the resolution submitted in the Legislature in favor of a seasonal tariff on these products by Hon. T. G. Coventry.

Toral was sentenced to be shot by a firing squad, and Mother Concepcion was given twenty years in prison. Inset shows General Obregon, who was killed in July, just after his re-election to the office of President of the Republic.

Many Engagements For Premier Tolmie

PREMIER Tolmie has a busy week-end in view. He leaves about noon today for the northern part of the Island, having an engagement to keep at Cumberland this evening, when he addresses the Canadian Club.

On Friday he is to be in Vancouver, with an address to the Young Conservative Club at noon on that day, followed in the evening with an address before the Institute of Mining and Metallurgy in Vancouver. The following day he is to address the Delta Board of Trade.

On March 14, 1928, in the Legislature, Dr. MacLean voted against that resolution.

Knowing Dr. MacLean and his by-election promises, Mr. Pooley said that Dr. MacLean had true to form, they might expect to see a boat, before election day, taking soundings off the Outer Wharf for the works he was promising. He had seen this in Nelson, where soundings were being taken for the bridge promised there. On election day those engaged were called in to vote and have not been seen since.

MR. MCKENZIE

Hon. W. A. McKenzie reiterated the stand taken by Dr. MacLean, who refused to vote in the House for moderate protection for the fruit and farm produce. Now Dr. MacLean said he would support protection for these products.

The moderate protection afforded the fruitgrowers was removed by the Liberal Government at Ottawa last year.

He admonished them to vote for the party approved by their principles, and not be led astray by the false promises of the other side.

THE CHAIRMAN

Mr. Leonard Tait advised the study of Canadian history, which was something to be proud of. Canadians were proud of British connection. It was the most democratic country in the world.

Mr. Leonard Tait presided at the platform by an able array of speakers who, with the exception of Mr. J. C. Brady, M.P., of Prince Rupert, spoke very briefly. There were, in addition to Mr. Brady, Hon. R. L. Matland, Hon. R. H. Pooley, and Hon. W. A. McKenzie. Mrs. C. H. Tait contributed a solo, which was well received, and she responded in return.

Stubborn Cough Quickly Ended by Famous Recipe

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that usually follow the "flu."

From any drugist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16 oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar, syrup or strained honey. Then you make 16 ounces of better remedy than you could buy, ready-made for three times the cost.

From any drugist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16 oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar, syrup or strained honey. Then you make 16 ounces of better remedy than you could buy, ready-made for three times the cost.

Not only does this simple mixture work directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and causes chest action in a way that is really astonishing. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles. Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

ness forced Canning's arm away to protect himself from the knife.

Fletcher said he was fifty-two years old, and was born at Chatham, Ontario. He had been engaged for ten or twelve years in training race horses all over Canada and the United States. He told of joining a "crap game" on the floor of the smoking-room of the boat. There were three colored men and several white men in the game.

"The game was in progress when Watkins, known as 'Rags,' entered the room. He came in the game and said, 'Four dollars I shoot.' I only saw $1, but he didn't take it. He took his $3 and left. Canning walked up, and said, 'He shoots $4, and said to me, 'Fletcher, do you want to make that dollar good?' I said to Canning, 'I'm not bothering you.'"

A FREE-FOR-ALL

Mr. Henderson: "Were you the leader of the game?"

"No, it was a free-for-all, and was started when I first entered the smoker."

"Who supplied the dice?"

"I couldn't say."

"Did you?"

Fletcher said he went out on to the deck of the vessel, and Canning struck him. He claimed Canning had a small blade in his clenched fist, with which witness was wounded on the wrist. Canning's wounds, he alleged, were caused as accused forced the knife away from himself. The accused denied that he himself had had a knife.

Cross-examined by Mr. Moresby, Fletcher said he didn't shoot dice, but was making bets. He hadn't rolled dice for five years. He denied ever saying, "Bet 'em up, gentlemen," and was unable to say whether anyone said, "Shake fair," because there was so much talking going on.

"TOOK NO OFFENCE"

Mr. Moresby: "Did you make threatening mutters and say, 'I'll fix him,' referring to Canning?"

"No, I just told Canning not to bother me."

His Lordship: "Canning was tantalizing you, was he?"

Fletcher: "Yes."

"And you took no offence?"

"No."

Mr. Henderson: "Were there two fights?"

"No, only one."

Mr. Moresby: "Did you run to the bridge of the ship and were you ordered off the bridge?"

"No, I was on the deck all the time."

Fletcher declared he was not in the crap game when the C.P.R. constable stopped it. There was another colored person wearing the same kind of suit present, and witnesses who said they saw him at that time must be mistaken, he contended.

"HE'S GOT A KNIFE"

Edward Bayley, newspaperman, employed by The Daily Province, Vancouver, testified to witnessing the fight between Fletcher and Canning from the promenade deck. The fracas didn't last long. Fletcher struck side blows different from ordinary fighting blows. Witness heard someone holler, "Look out, Bill, he's got a knife." Then Canning stopped fighting, put his hand down to his side, and when he drew it up again, it was covered with blood.

The accused then went along the promenade deck from the scene of the fight, running past the place where witness was standing. Bayley said he was absolutely sure that Fletcher was the man fighting with Canning.

Eric Swanson, sheet metal worker, Seattle, and Patrick Little, contractor, of Sequim, Wash., gave similar evidence for the Crown.

Canning, twenty-seven years old at the request of Crown counsel, stripped himself of sufficient clothing so that the jury could see the eleven scars on his back, chest, neck and elbow.

The jury which tried Fletcher was composed of Mr. William Henry Duckworth (foreman), Messrs. William Stirling, Percival E. George, John Albert Oddy, Archibald Guile, Leonard Wilson Noble, Leonard C. Oetler, George S. Lowe, Allan D. Ballantyne, Albert R. Nex, Alexander L. Innes and Samuel McOrmond.

HENRY A. LUND FOUND GUILTY

Accused Is Convicted at Assizes of Shooting Three Goats — Jury Strongly Recommends Mercy

SENTENCE TO BE IMPOSED

A verdict of guilty, with a strong recommendation for mercy, was returned by the petit jury yesterday afternoon at the Criminal Assizes here in the case of Henry Adam Lund, who was tried on a charge of wilfully wounding three goats, the property of Walter Stewart Matthews, Jones Road, near Parson's Bridge, on March 28, 1928.

The jury reached its finding after thirty minutes' consideration, and Mr. Justice W. A. Macdonald, presiding, read the verdict.

The jury reached its finding after thirty minutes' consideration, and Mr. Justice W. A. Macdonald, presiding, read the verdict.

Mr. William C. Moresby, K.C., was Crown Prosecutor, and Mr. W. H. Bullock-Webster was counsel for the defense.

TELUS OF SHOOTING

The first Crown witness was Walter Stewart Matthews, of Victoria West, who was living at the date of the offence at Jones Road, Esquimalt district. He testified that he was a goat dairyman, and had twenty or twenty-five goats. Captain Lund, the accused, was his next door neighbor.

"My attention was drawn about 4 p.m. on March 28 to my goats on Lund's property. There must have been twelve or fifteen goats there. I picked up my hat, and ran across the field to chase them out of his land. Before I reached the fence line between our properties, I saw Lund coming towards me with a gun. I slowed up, thinking that Lund was going to endeavor to fight me. He, however, fired three shots towards the goats. It occurred to me that he was just trying to frighten them, but I noticed that he was aiming carefully enough to hit them. I called to him, saying that he had no right to shoot the goats, and he replied that he could shoot whatever was on his side of the line," Matthews told the jury.

Matthews said he examined the goats, and then telephoned for the police. Constable Richard Meadows responded. The wounds on the goats were punctures, and witness didn't think that it was possible for the wounds to have been caused by barbed wire fences.

GOATS A NUISANCE

Cross-examined by Mr. Bullock-Webster, witness admitted that his goats had been a nuisance to his neighbor, Lund, prior to March 28. Matthews couldn't say at what distance from the goats Lund fired the shots.

Mr. Bullock-Webster—You didn't resent Lund using his shotgun to frighten the goats off his property?

"No. But he should have been more careful in his firing."

Dr. James Henry Keown, veterinary surgeon, told of examining three goats at Matthews' place on the evening of March 28. Witness said the three goats had been shot and described the injuries sustained by the animals.

Mr. Moresby—Could the wounds have been caused by barbed wire?

"Well, the flesh of the goats was not torn. The wounds were holes."

E. W. Richards, Langford dairyman, told of examining the three goats at Matthews' place the same day, and corroborated Dr. Keown's evidence concerning the damages to the goats.

My Back Stopped Aching as Husky Took Away Acids

"And Now All the Rheumatic Pains Are Leaving My Body," Says Mason Street Man.

J. M. ANDERSON

"A friend told me Husky was good for rheumatism and it sure is—it stopped my backache," said J. M. Anderson, of 44 Mason Street, well known steamship man.

"I had rheumatic trouble in the small of my back," he said, "and the pains even went down into my hips and knees. They would often swell. I was full of acid."

"Husky began taking all the acid from my system and pretty soon the pain and swelling started going. Now I am altogether better than I have been in years. I hope others will take this medicine which has done me so much good."

Husky relieves chronic acidity (too much acid in the system), which irritates the mucous linings and robs the blood of the red corpuscles. It must have plenty of time to keep from getting thin and watery. That's why Husky relieves you so quick—it takes away those ravaging acids. The MacFarlane Drug Co. and other good drug stores everywhere always have Husky. (Adv.)

News and Notes of Realty in Victoria and District

By H. D. PATTERSON

The move in business and semi-business property quite overshadowed the sales of residential property at the present. It would be quite safe to say that more sales of downtown property have been made in the past month than in the whole of the year previous to that time, and the end is not yet. Many of the brokers dealing in this class of property report that interest is still keen on the part of buyers, and many more deals are under way. Needless to say, a considerable percentage of these properties have moved up in price, yet buyers do not seem to question the advances provided the locations suit their ideas of what is good.

The sale of residential property, however, still goes on. A most valuable country estate, the Bevan property on the waterfront at Quamichan Lake, has been recently purchased by some newcomers from England who, it is reported, have been making a worldwide search for suitable home in which to bring up their family. The property comprises sixty or more acres, with a large residence and outbuildings, and is considered one of the finest estates in the District. The property is owned by Messrs. J. A. Walker & Co., Ltd., who were responsible for the sale. A large residence on Rockland Avenue has also recently changed hands to a newcomer from Calgary.

NICOMEN ISLAND WORK UNDERTAKEN

Effort Will Be Made to Check Damages by Fraser Freshets to Low-Lying Level

An attempt is to be made to protect the rich area of Nicomen Island in the Fraser River. The 4,000 acres of the island has been the prey of floods for a number of years, and roads and farms have been damaged year after year with discouragement for all concerned.

The Provincial Government has decided to face the situation in a way to safeguard the area, and make it secure against the inroads of the river in its summer freshets.

The Department of Public Works is calling for tenders to carry out the protection works with the tenders to be opened on November 27. At 3:30 p.m. after the day these will be examined in public.

The situation is one that calls for a definite policy, and this has been adopted. The results of the annual flooding of the farms and the roads resulted in heavy expenditures for repairs from year to year. It is for the purpose of overcoming this that the present plan has been adopted. When it is completed it is anticipated that it will be secure against any flood staining even to that of the year 1890, which is the highest and most disastrous on record.

With the increase of the traffic along the road which follows closely the waterfront on the island, and which is part of the highway, the Department of Public Works is calling for tenders to carry out the protection works with the tenders to be opened on November 27. At 3:30 p.m. after the day these will be examined in public.

When it is completed it is anticipated that it will be secure against any flood staining even to that of the year 1890, which is the highest and most disastrous on record.

When the present road is abandoned, after the one to be constructed, protection works will be placed along the river side so as to make the farming sections safe from the inroads of the high water.

At the same time the Dominion Government will undertake, it is expected, the protection of banks of the river in such a way as to divert the heavy rush of water on the worst sections of the Island.

Work will start as soon as the tender is awarded, and will be rushed through without delay. The protection works along the shore line will be carried on without ceasing, to endeavor to complete the work by March.

BY-ELECTION ISSUES

The result of the coming Federal by-election in this city will indicate the attitude of our voters on a variety of issues of national importance. There is the migration issue; the fact that more foreigners than people of British birth are now being induced to come to Canada under a Liberal Administration; there is the related issue of the exodus of our people to the United States, an exodus which has been responsible for a loss of population of upwards of 600,000 since the MacKenzie King Government secured power.

Another national issue on which the people of Victoria will record their decision is that of Protection. Under the Liberals there has been a continuous process of tariff tinkering, mainly in the direction of reductions in the barriers placed against unfair competition. Various industries have suffered, and the extent to which they have suffered has led to the appointment of a Tariff Commission which is now holding court to endeavor to discover what must be done. The expectation is, however, that the Tariff Commission will accomplish very little; that, indeed, it was created to whitewash the fiscal policies of the Government, as commissions appointed by the Liberals have done before. The fact remains that lack of adequate Protection has meant such falling off in employment for Canada's growing population that a very considerable percentage of that population has been driven to a foreign land to seek the means of livelihood.

A matter which affects the agricultural industry of British Columbia in a very vital fashion will also be voted upon by Victorians in the by-election, namely, their attitude towards the imposition of the anti-dumping duties. Lack of such imposition by the Federal Government led to heavy losses in the fruit and vegetable industries of this province during the present year. This, too, is a national question, because the agricultural industry in both Quebec and Ontario has also suffered because of unfair American competition. The Conservatives of British Columbia are on record in favor of anti-dumping duties. They want the fruit and vegetable industries protected. Protection in the sense required is essential to the welfare of agriculture in this province.

Indirectly the people of Victoria will be recording their attitude on the St. Lawrence Waterway scheme by their vote on December 6. The development of that Canadian waterway by Canadians and for the purposes of Canadian prosperity is an essential plank in the platform of the Conservative Party of the Dominion. The Conservatives do not want joint American control so as to give the Americans a share in the power development. This question of the future of the St. Lawrence, as it is viewed by the Conservative Party under Mr. R. B. Bennett, is one of "Canada for Canadians." It is another illustration of the desirability of a protective policy which will forbid the alienation of the natural resources of the Dominion.

The Conservatives of Victoria on December 6 will be voting on a variety of Federal issues as well as the foregoing. They will be recording their viewpoint on the necessity of amendments to the Canadian-Australian Trade Treaty which will give the lumber trade of this province greater opportunities in the market of the Commonwealth than it has at present. Now the bulk of the lumber trade from this continent is catered to by Oregon and Washington, through lack of a preferential tariff on the commodity shipped from British Columbia. Under the Canadian-Australian Trade Treaty British Columbia has not benefited to anything like the extent that it should. The treaty stands in need of revision and the Conservatives of the Dominion, and particularly of British Columbia, have advocated amendments which would offer many advantages to the trade of the ports of this province.

The Conservative policies in national affairs are a matter of record and were outlined anew at the recent Convention at Winnipeg at which Mr. R. B. Bennett was chosen as leader of the party. The party is insistent on a return to the National Policy of Sir John A. Macdonald which laid the foundations of Federal prosperity. It wants the development of Canadian resources for our own people; it desires that the raw products should be manufactured at home, thus providing employment in the Dominion and putting an end to the exodus of the flower of our youth to the United States. It wants to put an end to the facilities which now exist for the dumping in this country of the surplus products of American industry which are sold in unfair competition with our own products and manufactures. It wants to encourage a strong, virile, self-supporting country which will become all the time more self-reliant and self-contained. Victoria can endorse the policy of "Canada for Canadians" by voting for Mr. D. B. Plunkett, the Conservative candidate, on December 6.

AUSTRALIAN POLICIES

As an outcome of the elections in Australia and the renewed confidence shown in the Government of Premier Bruce a programme of policies is now being prepared which was promulgated during the course of the late campaign. There is to be an Air Force developed under a scheme prepared by Air Marshal Sir John Salmond. The coastal clauses of the Navigation Act are to be repealed and protection substituted for them through the tariff for vessels complying with Australian standards of wages and living conditions. This is in pursuit of an effort to foster coastal trade. The Government proposes to refer to the Tariff Board the question of the rate of duty to be imposed on passengers and cargo carried by British and foreign ships engaging in the coastal trade. It is felt that if a duty is imposed sufficient to protect Australian shipping fair competition will be insured with more efficient service and lower fares and freights. With the revenue derived from these duties subsidies are to be paid to Australian shipping for services in the less developed portions of the Commonwealth.

Premier Bruce's programme embraces a decision to call a conference of the States of the Commonwealth to bring about co-operation in transport, social legislation, relief of unemployment and the development of power resources. There is to be development of reciprocal trade with Great Britain by an extension of preferential treatment by each country to agreed classes of goods. The Government is to co-operate in the establishment of Imperial airship communications. Concessions and reasonable financial assistance will be given to private companies for the development of North Australia, this aid to apply particularly where sheep-raising projects are concerned. In population growth it is the intention to continue the policy of maintaining the present 98 per cent. proportion of British people. This is a matter which is now being watched carefully through the medium of limits placed on alien immigration. Other measures proposed are a Department of Maternal Hygiene, financial assistance to the establishment of tuberculosis clinics, and an act to insure the uniformity of life assurance law.

UNIVERSITY TRAINING

Lord Melchett, one of the greatest of modern captains of industry, does not believe that the function of a university is vocational. So far as industry is concerned he urges its leaders not to make the mistake of assuming that university training "exists for the purpose of turning out individuals who will rapidly and efficiently take their place and part in the progress of industry in some capacity or another." This is a new light thrown upon university education by a man who ought to know. Lord Melchett regards a university as primarily a centre of learning. It is a place, he says, where a man will find out what he does not know, and where one of his most valuable assets should be a knowledge of how to obtain further information. In other words, the university, instead of being a vocational centre, "is a place for the training of the mind for the development of mental processes." Lord Melchett says that the mind once trained can apply its ability to a variety of problems and premises. This viewpoint is all the more interesting at a time when universities are more and more being made the centres of vocational training. The present tendency of higher education, as it is sometimes erroneously called, is to neglect the broad highway of learning for the by-ways of specialized effort.

In Britain a Communist has been forbidden employment in Woolwich Arsenal, a certain section of the Labor Party objects. It is pointed out, with irrefutable logic, however, by The London Daily Chronicle that a member of the Communist Party is not merely a person holding a certain opinion. "He is," says that newspaper, "a member of an organization pledged to obey foreign orders with a view to subverting the State. Such a person cannot possibly be regarded as a trustworthy employee, least of all at Woolwich Arsenal, where he might have power to do incalculable mischief. It is foolish to ask any Government to put revolutionary firebrands in their powder magazines."

A GREAT ADVENTURE

In his own dear Arden, Shakespeare,
On a signal night in Spring,
Went adventuring and met with
New words to sing.
And the silver moon was peering
Through the black of branching trees;
And the moment was for William,
Eternity's.

He had sought this place of wonder
Since the first hour he was man.
When the perfect name for woman
He knew was Ann.
And he found the tree of heaven,
Where the green leaves were for healing...
And the birds were words.

Then, Enchanted, Willow, Will-See,
And a thousand others flew
From a depth of things forgotten,
To live anew
In the great heart of the poet,
Knowing death was not to be
When he offered Ann a music
For you and me.

—Armel O'Connor.

Note and Comment

By R. L. D.

Mr. Harvey O'Higgins has discovered something that may be either a great truth or the product of an intensely poetic imagination. Writing, presumably, about the presidential election in the United States, Mr. O'Higgins oracularly declares that "a man is not elected by his friends but by his opponents' enemies." That is, the political and economic issues played no part whatever in the campaign. The emotions of the people were aroused, and of all the various emotions, that of hatred is most easily aroused, and hatred is a characteristic emotion of the people of the United States. That is what Mr. O'Higgins says, and as the discoverer of the great truth is probably now a citizen of the United States, it doubtless is his privilege to say something that if said by an alien might create offence.

At the same time, we do not think it would be safe for the practical politician in the United States or anywhere else to govern his political course by the discovery of Mr. O'Higgins. The late presidential campaign in the United States was of course a somewhat unusual campaign. The defeated candidate was an emotional man, and he was the speaker who aroused all the emotions. Mr. Hoover certainly is neither an emotional nor a passionate man, and his appeals did not arouse passions of any kind, good or evil. Yet he was elected. President Coolidge is as cool as an iceberg, and he was elected too after a campaign that was completely destitute of passions or emotions. Thus the result was identical in both cases. And thus the logical politician might be justified in saying that the victor in both cases was the result of a fair presentation of the political and economic issues, with the social issue of Prohibition thrown in for good measure.

Still we think the meaning of Mr. O'Higgins may be guessed. In making his rather extraordinary declaration he was hinting at the "whispering campaign" of the opponents of Mr. Smith. Mr. O'Higgins says "the practical politicians know that the people do not vote with their intellects but with their emotions, and the emotion easiest to arouse in the American people is hatred. Certainly it is much more easy to arouse than any more affectionate or loyal or friendly feeling." If that indictment is true, the political party with which Mr. Smith is allied, and with which probably Mr. O'Higgins has become allied too, is not altogether free of responsibility for it. The emotion of hatred has played a prominent part in many election campaigns in the United States, but the evil passions aroused in the past have been directed against people of foreign countries, generally for no reason whatever and absolutely without justification. There was no twisting of the Lion's tail in the late election except in the solitary case of the eminent Big Bill Thompson, Mayor of Chicago, and his eminence will never twist another tail, foreign or domestic. He is a man of his own kind. Thus, instead of twisting the tails of "beasts" animated by the most fiery feelings, the politicians of the United States are twisting their own tails. The weapons they used have been turned against themselves. And it is the misfortune of the Democratic party that it is the first victim of the system.

Passing from the particular to the general, there is no doubt whatever that passions are active agents in many elections. There are effective political appeals to passions in every country. Our own Canadian politicians have been known to appeal to the passions of the multitude, to the passion of greed as well as to the passion of hatred. Even the sacred emotion of patriotism has been prostituted to base purposes. Let a public man but tumble in the course of a speech and say something it would have been more discreet not to have said, and observe how quickly and violently his political opponent's descent upon him like a pack of ravening wolves, with some of his friends taking an active part in the ferocity. That is what Mr. O'Higgins has in mind when he refers to a candidate for public office not being elected by his friends but by his opponents' enemies.

Apart from all speculative imaginings, however, the Republican Party was the stronger party in the late presidential election. At Smith could not have been elected even if the passion of hatred had played no part in the contest. The nation was prosperous, and the people of the nation voted for a continuation of that prosperity under a regime which could reasonably and legitimately claim responsibility for prosperity. The only element of the population that was dissatisfied because it was not sharing in the prevailing prosperity was the farming element, and it was promised prosperity under effective protection. The American people are the most conservative people in the world today. When a road is smooth and "the going good" they will not take any chances. A change of Government might produce a change in the material circumstances of the State. Any candidate of the Republican Party would have beaten any candidate of the Democratic Party.

SOCIAL SERVICE WORK

Sir,—Public attention has recently been enlisted for the Social Service League. Some misconception may possibly exist as to its functions. In that it is an organization that is in the service of such excellent institutions as the Friendly Help, the Y.O.V., the Salvation Army and kindred organizations that are extending charitable aid. This is emphatically not the case. The Social Service League has a field distinctly its own. Its main claim is that it is an organization that exists to help the unfortunate to help themselves, to rehabilitate the fallen, to rescue the home, to rescue the underprivileged child, and to direct with intelligent assistance the welfare of those specially trained in welfare work supervised by volunteer workers. Outside of this, it maintains a Summer camp for the relief and rest of the overworked and tired mother, affording a holiday for her children, with fresh air, substantial food and fresh milk. A little relief and joy is thus brought to the lives of the wise and deprived; both mothers and kiddies have returned from these outings healthier and happier. The ties of the League are open to inspection; they record the grateful thanks not only of the mothers for themselves and their children, but from those for whom the League has found employment, from the aged whose declining years have been cheered and comforted from the fallen who have been re-established. Its records show how provision has been made for the mentally unfit, and how, through the generosity and kindness of the medical fraternity of Victoria, the sick and crippled have been taken care of. The co-operation of the Provincial Superintendent of Neglected Children has been enlisted, and through that channel the underprivileged child is given its opportunity.

The League is absolutely unpolitical. Its members are not adherents of all creeds are represented on the directorate and all have co-operated to carry out the aims of the League. While much has been accomplished, there is much left to do. Victoria, where every prospect pleases, where the sun throngs on the streets, where the well-dressed and seemingly prosperous, has like other places, just round the corner, the man out of a job with a family and the prospect of an emptyarder, the down-trodden and discouraged, and directed to worthy citizenship, the sick or crippled child, who might by intelligent treatment, taken in time, become whole and healthy; the neglected child whose playground is the street. Surely this is the cause that will enlist the sympathy and support of the citizens of Victoria.

W. B. LANIGAN.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION

Sir,—In glaring headlines we read in your evening contemporary that the business men of Victoria were in favor of the Liberal nominee at the forthcoming by-election, and an interview is given out from three gentlemen, two being the leading members of that organization. Victoria, asking the support for a credited leader at a previous election, they ask consideration on account of the necessity of port development in Victoria, and being in accord with the Liberal administration at Ottawa, Mr. MacLean would be more likely to obtain such necessities than an opponent. If these are the tenets and ethics of the Liberal administration, then statesmanship is sadly in need of revision.

The Hon. Mackenzie King was credited with the remark that "Pre-election promises were to be taken with a grain of salt." If so, and I cannot recall ever having seen it refuted, this can be chronicled, I presume, as another condition of modern statesmanship.

The Conservatives of Victoria are being asked to forego the protective policies of their party, disregard the leader, be untrue to their principles for the promise of a mass of pot-shots and well-aimed arrows of the rapid development of the province of its resources. It cost an average of $5,000 to the home and state to rear and educate our youth from birth to maturity, which is a direct liability. After that, the state becomes an asset, enriching the wealth of the country $2,500 per year. Under a non-protective policy we are driving our productive and national assets to the United States to enrich that nation, while we assume the liability. We are crying aloud for protection, and an expense are willing to accept the unfurnished product of Europe for our own finished product who are enriching the commercial and industrial life of our neighbor.

There are today more Canadians and their families in the United States than there are in Canada, and we are asked to give support to a policy that makes for the spoliation of resources and our sons to manufacture them for us in a foreign land. As labor alone creates wealth, let us take the precepts that have made the United States so wealthy. Husband our resources that they may be industrialized at a profit, protect our labor against a standard of living that has no purchasing power for the creation of wealth by labor is measured by the purchasing power of labor.

The port development of Victoria subject to the Canadian National Railways, who are without a coast seaport except Victoria in Southern British Columbia, and we can rest assured that if we give proper consideration to conditions, such port development, being a railway necessity, will be carried out irrespective of either the Liberal or Conservative dominion.

It therefore behooves every Conservative to fight for his principles and when our leader, Mr. Bennett, arrives in Victoria, not only give him a rousing reception but give a most emphatic majority for the cause we have in him and the cause he so ably endorsed.

The Book of Pioneer Women—How It Was Written

N. DE BERNARD LORAIN

Over in the Provincial Archives in a quiet, sunny corner from the windows of which one gets a delightful view of the Sooke Hills, and a glimpse of the historic Burrell of Juan de Fuca, the Book of Pioneer Women has been written. To this secluded nook throughout the past six months have come the dear old ladies themselves to tell their stories, some of them a little feeble and needing assistance for the rather long tramp along the corridors; others scoring the life and wailing up the stairs as they tell of their early days. A little shy at first, and occasionally frankly frightened at the idea of facing an interviewer, they have soon lost all self-consciousness in the recalling of the happy days of their youth, chatting away freely and with the most charming naivete.

Behind their stories they have brought with them many mementoes of other days. With fingers not quite steady, they have untied the old ribbons from precious letters, yellow with age but fragrant still with the perfume of dried rose petals. Letters written from "home" in Scotland, when they first came to "Vancouver Island" in the early fifties. Their own letters "home" which have been carefully preserved and returned to them here. The phraseology is homely and quaint. "We have wearied lang and sair for word of you." "I should be very glad for I have only a small Pitcher to boll my tea in and it leaks." "I have to tell you of the death of a poor young woman in Childwick, who was buried this afternoon. She came out with us and her name was Isabella Weir. She was married to Andrew Muir. The child is living, and old Mrs. Muir is going to take it away to Sooke." "Mary is growing into a big lass, and she would like a doll from Scotland. There is no such thing as a doll in these parts." "My dear parents, by the help of God I am allowed to write you a few lines to let you know that we have arrived quite safe, after a passage of five months. We left Gravesend, August, 1852." "The natives are all around the ship, some of them naked, some of them with blankets on. The women are scared of them." "I have to tell you of the death of dear little Mary. God's will be done on earth as it is in Heaven." The "love letters" are couched in most dignified phraseology, the borders often embellished with fine scroll work. Among the souvenirs are ancient invitations, daguerotypes, miniatures, old-fashioned jewelry, samplers—all things that were brought out to the West in the infant days of the colony, and which served as reminders through the lonely years, of the loved homeland.

Other manuscripts and documents which were read in order to throw light upon the stories were those of Mrs. Barkley, James Deans, Robert Melrose, Andrew Muir, Roat Harvey, and there was the account of John Tod, by Gilbert Malcolm Sproat, and Mr. Pinlayson's autobiography. The books consulted were legion. In order to write intelligently of any period one must become steeped in the atmosphere of that particular time. To get the old viewpoint one could not find a better place than the Provincial Archives, which is a repository for countless pictures and published and unpublished materials dealing with the early Port days. Mr. John Hoste, Provincial Librarian and Archivist, and his assistants, Miss Russell and Mrs. Cree, have been untiring in their efforts to facilitate the work. They made of the writing of this book a most delightful task.

Among the volumes from which was gleaned much to give reality and color to the narratives were books on Port Churchill, Sir John Franklin's Expeditions, Bancroft's Histories, Schofield and Howay, Denison's Far West Coast, The River of the West, and a score of volumes on the history of Oregon, which was part of New Caledonia and, in the old days, belonged to the British, Fort Bridger and many another story of the Overland Journeys.

Major Aitken, chief geographer, furnished maps of British Columbia, showing the old brigade trails and the forts. The routes of these brigades were marked by Mrs. Manson and her daughter, and other descriptions given by Major Manson and Mrs. Munroe.

Among those who rendered valuable advice and sympathetic encouragement was dear old Jason Allard from the Mainland, whose memory goes back nearly eighty years, and whose life and that of his father and mother are inseparably interwoven with the history of the Hudson's Bay, Mr. R. T. Williams, for many years the maker of the directories for Victoria, retains the most lively impressions of nearly all of those persons who lived here during the early days afterwards. He has worked tirelessly to accumulate the wanted information and names.

Much that he has done will help to build another volume.

It will be seen, then, that this book of Pioneer Women is, in a sense, unique. It is more than mere history. It is to a large extent a living document, many of the stories in it coming straight from the lips of those who had lived and moved in those stories as the principal actors. It is very seldom that a chronicler has the good fortune of getting information first hand. Among the hundreds of volumes relating to the history of our province on the shelves in the Provincial Library, there is not another like this one. That is the reason why the Women's Canadian Club is to be congratulated on bringing out the book when it did, while some of the oldest of the pioneers are still among us, and can describe from their crystal-clear memories the very beginning of our Western civilization.

criminal cases to be tried, Mr. Jussises here today and the grand jury retired shortly after 11 o'clock with a request from him that they first consider the case of Ching Ming

King, charged with unlawfully importing narcotics into Canada. This case arose out of a seizure by local customs officers here in July of opium, valued at approximately $144,000, which is alleged to have been shipped on the Empress of Russia to the accused at Nanaimo.
One hour after the grand jury had retired, they returned with a was started, evidence being heard from various members of the local customs staff.After hearing this evidence, court adjourned until Wednesday morn-

Later the grand jury brought in a accused of permitting the defilement of a girl under the age of fourteen years, the offence being alleged to have taken place on premises owned when the packages were opened.

George Archibald gave evidence to the effect that as chief clerk at the Canadian Pacific Railway wharf in Nanaimo, he collected freight money on a shipment of freight to Lum Mow, Nanaimo. Witness did business with Lum Mow, and was identified in court. Witness collected freight charges from the accused and gave him a receipt for the same.George Johnson, of the local customs staff, informed the court that he knew the accused as Ching Ming
King, doing business in Nanaimo under the name of Lum Mow.On July 25 the witness saw the accused, who entered the customs to clear a freight shipment, and paid the charges, after which he was to come back and the customs officers would inspect some of the goods, which was done at 2:30 p.m.
Witness stated customs officers had

Mrs. Harold Strubling, wife of a former high school football star, was attacked and struck in the face with the hatchet. She was taken captive by him and led to a lonely spot in a swamp, not far from their home, which is in Iowa, just across

AT HEALTH CENTRESaanich Medical Health Officer
Makes Suggestions to Check DiseaseDr. Berman, medical health officer of Saanich, gave an address under the auspices of the Health Centre at the Lake Hill Community Hall yesterday afternoon. Dr. Berman, in speaking of the subject of health, said that the topic was so wide that it was difficult to narrow it down to any particular matter, and that the appreciation of the value of health is only realized when people lack it. Disease is caused by infection, malnutrition, exposure and industrial hazard, and the establishment of modern health agencies in cities and municipalities has done much to eradicate and prevent disease. Dr. Berman pointed out that the ill-health of chronic and mental defects is costing much in new buildings and instanced the additions being made at Ross-dale Asylum to meet the constant increase of these cases of people who are not fit.Sanitation, good houses and pure water, with health surroundings, are essential in any district, and this,
he thought, might be the crucial point in the seasonal discussion going on. Dr. Berman proceeded to give some practical advice to the mothers present regarding the upbringing and health of the children, saying there was an ever increasing burden on the community through defective children. He alluded to the recent criticism of failures in the outlying schools, saying the blame was not on the teachers but more on the habits of the children.
Dr. Berman, since he came to Saanich as medical health officer, said he had been trying to eradicate one disease which was very common, viz. diphtheria. The doctor urged immunization of their children in such cases, concluding his address by saying: "If you want to prevent the spread of infection do not visit the sick, the only persons in attendance on the sick should be the doctor and the nurse."
Mrs. Winkle proposed a vote of thanks to Dr. Berman, which was carried unanimously.Dominion Organizer

HONOR SCHUBERT WITH HIS MUSIC

Club Marks Centenary of Composer's Death With Recital at Victoria High School

Almost to a day on the one hundredth anniversary of his death, Franz Schubert, "the greatest song writer who ever lived," was commemorated last night by the Schubert Club in a recital at the High School.

The musical part of the programme was only slightly biographical, as but a fragment of the wealth of Schubert's composition could be given in a single evening. But Mr. Fra. Dillworth filled in some of the missing facts in a short talk which he gave at the very beginning of the recital. In this he spoke of Schubert's life, of his poverty and obscurity, of the loyal and admiring friends who, together with his great joy in his music, compensated the composer for his meagre by publishers; of the romantic influences of the period in literature and art which affected his music; of the originality of his style, its simplicity of melodic structure, its sincerity, its freedom from modulation and its consequent greater subtlety and adequacy as a medium for the expression of human emotion; of his gift for spontaneous melody, and the fine poetic inspiration which he found in Goethe, Schiller, Scott and Shakespeare. Finally, something was said about each of the numbers on the programme, the source of their inspiration, their character, their relation to each other.

SOME NEW VOICES

The choir and the instrumental trio and quartette approached everything with sincerity and the whole atmosphere of the recital was characterized by the greatest reverence, earnestness and pleasure in the performance. The choir has published some very fine new voices since it was last heard, and the tone is even more consolidated and better balanced. For the most part the singing of the various numbers conveyed the spontaneous effect which Schubert's music should give. For much of it was written for quick impromptu which stamped it as an improvisation of the moment. Where it was intended to be bright, fresh, happy, vivid, as in "Hark! Hark! the Lark" (one of the two Shakespeare songs given), or eager, quick-moving, quivering, with little outbursts of boisterousness, as in "Impatience" and "Whither" (two of the "Beautiful Miller Maid" cycle), the right spirit was felt, although in some instances more perfectly expressed than in others. "Impatience" was a particularly fine expression of these three, generously colored with eagerness of feeling, tenderness, ardor, and a rapid-moving tempo sustained throughout without any detriment to diction, pitch, or phrasing.

"Hark! the Lark" was a beautiful joyous, although a little thin in tone. "Whither" repeated as an encore, carried an admirable balance and intonation, but the tempo was slightly dragged. The lyrical charm of "Who is Sylvia?" was nicely expressed.

The programme was opened and closed with religious numbers, "The Lord is My Shepherd," written in 1820, when Schubert was only twenty-three years of age, and "Omni-potency." These are in the composer's most mature style, reflecting the profoundest religious sentiment. The choir approached the works with becoming reverence, earnestness, and sincerity. Miss Grace Platt sang the solo part in the last in very commendable style.

Two particular favorites on the programme were "Ave Maria," an arrangement by Saar for choir, solo voice, and violin obbligato, and Saar's arrangement of "To Music." Both these had to be repeated in the last in very commendable style.

Liner to Visit Lonely Tristan da Cunha

NATIVES OF TRISTAN DA CUNHA

Loneliness has always been the lot of peoples in isolated communities, but it is doubtless the remotest of the South Atlantic Ocean, on practically a straight line from Buenos Aires, is off the regular route of ocean-going vessels, and is rarely visited except by an occasional cruising liner. Last year the Empress of France, on her South American-Africa cruise, touched at Tristan and landed supplies and trinkets as gifts from the passengers and King George and Queen Mary of England to the 30 inhabitants; and in 1929 the new Canadian Pacific Steamer, the Duchess of Atholl, after having cruised among the West Indies and down the eastern coast of South America, will visit Tristan for a few hours to bring cheer, solace and supplies to the islanders, then steam away to continue her South American-Africa cruise which leaves New York, January 22, 1929, for a voyage of 104 days.

Tristan da Cunha was named after a Portuguese admiral, who discovered it in 1506. Portugal's possession in the name of Great Britain was taken by troops from the transport Plymouth on August 14, 1816. The island may one day occupy a prominent place in world affairs, for it is ideally located as a stopping-off place for transatlantic airplanes, should a regular air service between South America and Africa ever be established. The Duchess of Atholl will call, also, at Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Capetown, and Durban, South Africa, with side trips to Africa's interior: Dar-es-Salaam, Zanzibar, Mombasa, and ending with Egypt, the Mediterranean, Paris and London. Incidentally, the Duchess of Atholl is a 20,000-ton ship, the largest ever to reach Montreal.

A New Powerplant

—which makes every Packard a Packard Eight

THE new Packard eight-in-line powerplant for its 126 and 133-inch wheelbase models reflects Packard's 30 years of experience in building and servicing all types of motors.

The eight-in-line engine originated in Europe where it was developed by those manufacturers who have since unanimously abandoned the V-type for it. But Packard was the first prominent American maker to introduce it.

Packard's lead was promptly followed by other American builders so that, whereas prior to 1923 thirty American manufacturers of multi-cylinder cars were making V-type motors, today there are but four.

Whereas, previously, twenty-two European manufacturers had been marketing V-type motors, today not a single one is still using them in stock car production.

Five years of constant study of the straight eight, based solidly on Packard's successful development of this type engine for its 136 and 143-inch wheelbase cars, had so firmly proved the basic merits of the eight-in-line principle that Packard decided to completely standardize on eights.

With the new motor Packard puts eight-cylinder smoothness, power and performance at the command of thousands who in the past did not feel they could afford the supreme luxury of transportation which a Packard Eight provides.

You may demonstrate the new Packard Standard Eight at any time. Come in or phone and one will be placed at your disposal. We promise you a new experience in motoring luxury.

The Packard Standard Eight 5-pass. Sedan costs but, $3,850, fully equipped at Victoria.

Old London Ceremony

THE Lord Mayor of London had, in the old days, a right to a fraction of the fruit in every consignment coming into London. In recent years this has been abandoned, but, instead of getting a little from each shipment of fruit, the Lord Mayor was given an annual presentation of fruit by the Worshipful Company of Fruiteers. The above photograph was taken at the Guildhall and shows the Lord Mayor, Sir Charles Batho (centre), and the Master of the Worshipful Company of Fruiteers (left), at the ancient ceremony in the Guildhall. The fruit, which included apples, plums, pears and grapes, came from British Empire sources except for some pineapples.

Dresses Seen on Stage

Theatregoers View Some Beautiful Gowns in Plays Now Running in London

At the theatres can be seen many of the new phases of dress, such as the various dipping lines at the back, the shortened line of the skirt in front, the evening cloak that matches and takes the line of the dress, the indoor ensemble with coat of varying length, and the artificial jewelry that takes the color of a frock, says an article in The London Times.

In "Virginia," at the Palace, Miss Emma Haig, though she wears them with a bizarre air, has some interesting frocks. The first is a sleeveless sports frock of heavy white crepe de Chine, with a very tight bodice buttoned down the front, with red buttons, and finished with a red belt. The skirt has narrow panels inset with fluted godets, and is bordered with red. A big bow of red organdie is tied in front of the high turn-down collar. An afternoon frock of white chiffon is also made with a tight-fitting corset, and has trimmings of rouleau of powder blue and a big sash of blue faille. The sleeves are loose and flowing, and the full skirt is made with graduated scallops at the hem, between each of which are appliques of the powder blue. She also has a negligee outfit of apricot-pink georgette, with a tight-fitting coat which widens at the hem, showing appliques of ecru lace and finished with graduated points.

PICTURE-STYLE FROCK
Miss Marjorie Gordon wears an evening gown in pale amber lace, made in picture style, dipping at the back and finished with diamante shoulder straps. She has a coat and skirt of steel-blue satin beauty, trimmed with its dull reverse, and made with braces on the skirt which show sharply against a pale yellow blouse. Another frock of a new bright green, has a deep vest of ecru lace.

Mrs. Garnet Hughes Dies While In London

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—Word was received here today by cable of the sudden death in London, of Elizabeth Irene Bayless Garnet Hughes, nee Newling, wife of Major-General Garnet Hughes, of Toronto. The cable merely states she died yesterday in a nursing home.

Born in London in 1885 she was educated at Westminster, and then resided in Victoria, B.C., where General Hughes first met her. The marriage took place in Victoria in 1910. During the war, while her husband was serving in France, Mrs. Hughes did war work in England, being engaged part of the time as a nurse. She had been living in England since 1915, and when General Hughes saw her last, two months ago, she was slightly ill. General Hughes leaves for England today.

Miss Hazel Henderson, Herd Road, spent the week-end in Victoria visiting relatives.

Mrs. Alfred Peterson and her three sons, Charlie, Leslie and Elmer, have returned from Vancouver, where they have been living for the past few months.

Social at Marigold

One of the most successful socials of the season was held in Marigold Hall on Monday evening, when the young Conservatives of the ward and their friends met and enjoyed themselves at the first of a series of entertainments to be given during the winter months. Prior to the dancing a short business session was held and the following officers of what is to be known as the Ward Four Young People's Social Club were elected: President, William Griffin, Jr.; vice-president, Miss M. Ferrie; secretary, Mr. W. J. Lynn; committee, Misses E. Orlin, H. Hosson, N. Lynn, F. Ferrie and Mr. George Griffin.

These will conduct the activities of the club until the end of December, when the annual meeting will be held.

Provision was made for those who did not dance in the form of cards, while those who took part in the dancing were loud in their praise of the manner in which it was carried out, novel features being introduced throughout the evening, among which was the lemonade, causing great merriment on all sides.

Supper was served by the ladies' committee from the senior association, composed of Mesdames Lynn, Griffin and White.

Here another novel feature was introduced in the form of a scrip prize, the tag being concealed in a piece of cake which fell to the lot of Fred Hawkins. The scrip which was worth $2.50 was kindly donated by the Salmon Art Store.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered all those who contributed to the success of the evening, and the happy throng after deciding to hold another dance on December 3 dispersed at midnight.

Faces New Count
In the city police court yesterday, Robert Watson, who is under sentence of ten days in jail for driving a car while intoxicated, was arraigned on a charge of breaking and entering the house of E. Housley, 40 Howe Street, on November 17, and committing theft. The accused sought an adjournment, and Magistrate George Jay remanded the case until this morning. Watson reserved election and plea.

A UNIQUE ENSEMBLE

In "77 Park Lane," at St. Martin's, Miss Marion Lorne's only outfit is delightful. There is an evening cloak of carnelian ring velvet trimmed with fox dyed to tone; the coat is shaped to the design of the frock, which appears below the hem, and the big sleeves are embroidered in beads of the same tone. Her gown is of a pale shade of carnelian net and gold-embroidered nixon made with a narrow high collar open in front and brought down, giving a waistcoat effect tied at the waist; it dips at the back and suits a mature figure. In the first act various evening cloaks are worn by the revellers; two of them are a silver lame wrap and an elaborate embroidered shawl.

VELVETS AND CHIFFONS

Indoors, in the second act, several evening gowns offer a choice of uneven line. Miss Veronica Turlegh wears a sapphire-blue dress made with a panne bodice with a basque over a lace skirt; this is matched in sapphire jewels. Miss Margaret Davey has a black moire tailored dinner suit and a satin blouse. A black satin frock made with a bustle bow at the back is worn by Miss Fay Hammond, and Miss Lintova has a decorative picture frock of jade-green chiffon taffeta and net which is draped to dip at one side.

In "The Mollusc," at the Comedy, Miss Constance Collier's dinner gown in pale bilberry broche velvet and georgette is made with a coat effect, and an afternoon outfit in beige georgette has a long coat with a hem of fur and a frock made with a wide double jabot. For her final appearance as a victim of nerves, she has a kind of negligee in shades of rose with a satin coat, which matches her immense satin pillow.

Elegance

Of some people one would not expect less than elegance—in personal appearance and surroundings they would be correct. And a fastidious care concerning the cleanliness of clothing, fabrics, curtains or drapings is not necessarily an expensive taste.

Considerable progress is being made with the Teachers' Superannuation Bill, which will be presented to the Legislature next year. The B.C. Teacher, organ of the B.C. Teachers' Association, has a subscriber issue, sets out the progress made during the month of October. Conferences have been held with the Department of Education, officials of the Education Board, the Department of Service Commissioner, and others interested, and have yet to be held with the Deputy Minister of Finance. The Education solicitor has also interviewed the Department of Finance and forwarded a draft of the bill in preparation for further conference. The chief problem arising is to provide for the gradual reduction to meet the requirements of the older teachers who will reach retiring age within the next few years, without the opportunity of providing much for their retirement. The statutory clauses of the proposed act. It has been suggested by the general secretary of the federation that the question of a cover and above what is available. The fund—might be raised by means of loans or temporary transfers from the capital account of the superannuation fund, or by a special reserve fund, such loans to be subsequently repaid. This suggestion is reported to have received the support of the Department, but further consultations with officials of the Department of Finance are required.

What sort of signals should a basketball team use and who should give them?

Answered By

EARL WIGHT

University of California

The noise of the bleachers makes it practically imperative that a system of silent signals be used in basketball. Physical positions seem to be the most practical for all conditions of competition. To be successful, a system of signals based upon physical positions must be sufficiently natural as to attract no undue attention, be sufficiently distinct as to be readily seen by the other four players, be capable of being given by a moving player.

Either forward or the centre should be able to give the signals. These three players should be constantly giving signals with a determination as to the one giving official signals.

What sort of signals should a basketball team use and who should give them?

Answered By

EARL WIGHT

University of California

The noise of the bleachers makes it practically imperative that a system of silent signals be used in basketball. Physical positions seem to be the most practical for all conditions of competition. To be successful, a system of signals based upon physical positions must be sufficiently natural as to attract no undue attention, be sufficiently distinct as to be readily seen by the other four players, be capable of being given by a moving player.

Either forward or the centre should be able to give the signals. These three players should be constantly giving signals with a determination as to the one giving official signals.

Chicago Cubs Will Have Heavy Hitting Ball Team

Cuyler, Wilson, Stephenson and Then the Addition of Hornsby Will Make Them Formidable Club Next Season

ROGERS HORNSBY and Cuyler will add to the Chicago team a punch not equalled by any other in the country except perhaps the Yankees team.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—"Old Scout" says: National League players will give three cheers for the deal that sent Rogers Hornsby to the Cubs.

There are plenty of cases in baseball history where a team loaded with hitters from the top of the list right down to the catcher failed to win a pennant, but the sharp who back their opinions with cash will place their money in these days on the slugging team.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Cubs is not going to walk into the pennant. The Giants are young and ambitious and McGraw may pick up one season's pitcher. If he does, the New York team will dispute with the Cubs all the way to the end. Pittsburgh will be no better than last season, and it is doubtful if the Cards will come through again after the four straight defeats at the hands of the Yankees.

One of McCarthy's troubles will come from too much temperance on the team. And yet the Cub leader has twice proven himself equal to the task of preserving harmony. It was feared last year when Hazen Cuyler joined the Cubs he would be in a constant clash with Hack Wilson for the honor of being the fans' hero. Once the season was on there was not a sign of trouble on the team. Cuyler, rated as the best center-fielder in the country, was assigned to right field. Wilson kept his job in center. Cuyler got his position as No. 3 in the batting order, a place that Donie Bush would not give him when he was with Pittsburgh. Wilson remained a clean-up man.

Now comes the first problem for McCarthy. Wilson and Hornsby are both clean-up men. If Hack is shoved up a notch, Cuyler will be sent to the left side of the plate, to fifth, Hack might thunder about batting in that spot.

McCarthy no doubt will insert Hornsby in the line-up right after Wilson and leave Hack where he is in fourth place. Imagine the mental anguish of a pitcher as he is told he will have to face the Cubs. First he greets English, second, perhaps, who knows, Wright of the Pirates, then up comes the fleet-footed Hack Cuyler. If the pitcher does not get all three he is doomed, for after them he will have Wilson and Hornsby. There ought to be a run over every other time that group goes to bat. A hurler's troubles are not ended there, for Stephen, next up, is even more dangerous in a pinch than the fence busters who bat above him. Then will be seen the first portside batter, Charley Grimm, and before resting upon the pitcher, Gabby Hartnett comes along, chatting and swinging his bat—a might bat it is, too.

The job of halting the Cubs next season may be likened somewhat to stopping the Yankees. It may not be done very often.

RUGBY CLASSIC WILL SEE BAYS AGAINST 16TH

Crack Fifteens Will Clash at Willows Oval on Saturday in Feature Tussle of Season

SAILORS TO MEET PIRATES' SQUAD

"Bob" McInnes, veteran coach and master mind of the J.E.A. Rugger, will pit his strongest fifteen against the 16th Canadian Scottish aggregation at the Willows Oval on Saturday in the feature tussle of the season. The battle promises to be one of those games you would like to witness again.

Two of the fastest, strongest and cleverest Rugby squads that have ever graced a field in this part of British Columbia for many a day, will be out there pitting their skill, using their weight and better knowledge of the game, in an effort to break through to victory. To a wary tactician, almost any which way will capture the honors for the present season. In all it looks like a championship battle minus the championship. There will be plenty of action and that's not all.

P. Tyson won the Island Road Club's hill climb in one minute twenty-five seconds, over a steep grade, which is about 650 yards long. J. Taylor was a close second in one minute forty-three seconds. As Told by Big Leaguers

Talking Today
GEORGE GRANTHAM: The Play That Pleased Me Most.
CLARENCE MITCHELL: How I Got My Start in Baseball.
FREDDIE LINDSTROM: Why I Became an Infidel.

GEORGE GRANTHAM says that the play that gave him the greatest satisfaction was not a home run or a triple with the bases full, a sensational catch or a fine bit of base-running, and George, by the way, is one of the fastest men in the big leagues.

"No, sir," says George, "there wasn't much to this play. It didn't call for any unique effort on my part. But it certainly pleased me a lot."

It occurred during the 1925 World Series, when Pittsburgh was playing Washington. I don't remember now whether it was the first game or the second. At any rate, Bucky Harris got to second base, with only one out.

"He took a long lead off second, so as to be able to score if the next pitch hit. However, the batter only poked a slow grounder down to short."

"Wright grabbed the ball and threw it to me at first for a put-out. But having got a good start, Harris didn't pause at this. He kept right on for home and almost got there. I threw and nailed him just in time."

"I guess I was lucky to have been switched to the infield. I changed from Tilden to Loyola High, which was a natural move. There Jake Weimer, the old National League pitcher, was coach. He liked me well enough to recommend me to John McGraw, who signed me up, sent me to Toledo for seasoning, and then brought me back to the Giants."

Hunter Spends Fireless Night in High Timber

VERNON, B.C., Nov. 20.—"Nibby" Broom, scoring ace of the Vernon Broom Club, spent a fireless night in the wilds he is not anxious to repeat. Setting forth Sunday in pursuit of a buck, he mounted one of the best of the Parris Creek plateau. When the sun went down he realized he was in for a night in the woods. A cigar lighter proved useless to light a fire in snow-dampened sticks, and he spent the night shivering from the cold. Early in the morning he back-tracked and was nearly out when a search party organized in Vernon met him.

CANADA EXPORTING MANY AUTOMOBILES

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—The steady advance of Canada in the automobile industry is revealed in statistics released today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. During October, passenger autos and freight vehicles to the value of nearly four million dollars were exported to different parts of the world. This figure represents an increase of nearly two million over the corresponding month of 1927, and a material advance over September. The figures show that during the month a total of nearly 10,000 automobiles and trucks were shipped out of the country.

RACE SUPERIORITY A MINUS QUANTITY ON PRAIRIE FARMS

One hears occasionally opinions expressed as to the nationality which produces the best farmers in the Canadian West, a somewhat profitless discussion since probably no two views as to what constitutes the "best farmer" would coincide. The respective bulk contributions of the various national constituents which make up Western Canada's farm population might perhaps be roughly judged from the following. At the time of the 1916 census there were in the Prairie Provinces 243,498 farm operators who reported their birthplaces. For $3.74, or 34 per cent of these, it was Canada; for 44,201, or 18 per cent, the British Isles; for 76,054, or 31 per cent, the remainder of the European Continent, some more than twenty countries being listed; for 38,890, or 15 per cent, the United States; for 761, or 3 per cent, British possessions.

PRIVY COUNCIL TO HAVE MORE JUDGES

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The House of Commons today agreed to a resolution, moved by the Attorney-General, Hon. F. B. Merriman, making financial provision for two additional members of the judicial committee of the Privy Council, with special Indian experience. The additional members are required as a consequence of the large increase of cases from India, necessitating formation of two courts. The new judges will receive salaries of $20,000 annually, shared equally by the Imperial and Indian Governments.

tional ill-feeling; or embarrassment. The competition pithily illustrated the fact that all of the many nationalities which make up the big agricultural family of Western Canada are contributing to the maintenance of the high standard of the farming industry of that territory. Tributes to Canadian farm opportunity are being paid continually by discerning visitors, men of standing in the affairs of their own countries. "Give me youth again, and I should not hesitate to come to Canada," stated John Garton, prospective president of Britain's largest organized group of farmers, the National Farmers' Union of England, after touring the country. "There are greater opportunities here for the young man with a little knowledge of farming than almost any other country in the world."

Australian Election Count Still Continues

MELBOURNE, Nov. 20.—The latest figures on the count of votes for Senate seats indicate that the Labor Party will have at least eight new Senate seats, as compared with six seats before the election. The counting of votes for the Senate has been proceeding slowly since the election of November 17.

CLOWN REFUSES TO LAUGH

He refused to sing and laugh it off, and as a result, Harry Davis, sixty-nine, a London restaurant keeper, has been indicted for converting to his own use $85 donated by subscribers to a testimonial for the clown. Walker, with grey hair and twinkling eyes, told in a London court of the plan outlined by Davis, who had said he would raise $10,000, but sent only a "many happy returns" letter to Walker.

World-Famous Stories

DORIMENE THE BEAUTIFUL

By CATULLE MENDES

(Catulle Mendes, 1841-1909, was a French poet, story-writer and dramatist. Probably his best known work is "Dorimene".)

Dorimene was beautiful and all the young swains made love to her in vain. Yet she always appeared to be a victim of the darts of love, and allowed everyone to woo her, though she never gave anyone any real cause to believe that he had succeeded in winning her affections. She beckoned men to approach, and then repelled them with an armor of cold indifference.

For ten months Lorys had adored Dorimene and had paid unsuccessful court to her hard heart. He was often tempted to call her the worst kind of a coquette. She had a perversity that was positively astounding. He did not pretend to understand her. Her maid, having hair almost, but not quite, as blonde as her own, supplied locks of hair to give to the suitors of Dorimene—without damaging the coiffure of Dorimene in the least.

Whoever waltzes with Dorimene for the first time always receives a pleasant shock. Under the table, afterwards, her point leather boot will convey messages against the toe of her partner's rougher boot. But that is all. She wants to be desired and adored, but she yields to no man's protestations of love.

To win such a woman what might a man do? Lorys had taxed all his ingenuity, all his knowledge of the game of love. He wanted her, indeed, more than he had ever wanted anything in his life. Yet he could not win her. Always he faced disappointment and failure.

Indeed, it was as impossible to resist her as it was to win her. No man could treat her with indifference. Yet she spurned all advances, all professions of marriage, all promises of love.

Lorys knew how to be the young man in love. He gazed at the stars, and wore a forget-me-not in his buttonhole. When he spoke to Dorimene he gazed at the inside of his hat. He sighed deeply. He followed her on her walks, even to church. He would put his hand on his heart as he addressed her. Finally, it seemed to him, she must recognize him, encourage him, yield to him. He showed his deep respect by stepping aside even for her shadow when she passed him in the sunlight!

Things reached a point where Lorys even wanted Dorimene to be angry with him. He wanted to arouse at least some kind of emotion in her. If she became angry with him it would show, certainly, that he was noticed, and that he was more than an ant crawling under her feet. But even this Dorimene the beautiful would not condescend to grant. She was always indifferent, always unattainable.

It was a long and doubtful method. Lorys was quite willing to admit, but it was the only course open to him, apparently. He simply would not—could not—give up. He must win Dorimene somehow, and have her for his own. If he could not win her from her some sign of recognition of his existence, the rest, he thought would be easier. But would he ever get even that much from this cool and indifferent beauty?

Yet perhaps it was not so doubtful, on reflection. Dorimene had already shown some small signs of devotion, on stormy nights. He likened it to how a drip-drip of water from a faucet will at last get to the serra of even the most stolid person. His attentions were so constant that at last they did begin to have some effect on Dorimene. Lorys began to feel that the day was high when she would endure this unacknowledged devotion no longer, but would begin to love him for himself. When a man is in love with a woman, he often is not far from having won her love.

Lorys even went outside the home of his own volition. He wanted her always to be able to look out and see him standing there, in the shadow of a tree, forlorn and lonely. He always hoped that some night her heart would soften and she would invite him in to warm himself by the fire. But she never did. And to keep up the appearance of devotion, on stormy nights he would often send a deputy—a servant named Joseph. In the shadow Joseph looked near enough like his master to serve in this capacity very well—especially after it became certain that Dorimene would never invite him in.

Then one night when Joseph was on duty he returned in the morning to tell his master of a surprising experience he had. He had been watching perhaps two hours when the house went dark and a window was opened. A voice spoke his master's name. He went closer, concealing himself in the cloak. The voice, a sweet feminine voice, said Joseph, invited him to come in—providing, however, he would consent to come in the dark. She had burned her cheek a little with the curling iron, she said, and did not wish him to see her in the light. But she was so very lonely this rainy evening.

"And did you tell her," Lorys asked breathlessly, "that you were not me, but only my servant?"

"No, indeed," said Joseph honestly. "You told me always to act as if I were you. And since it was dark I did not have to give you away. So I went in, just as if I were you."

It was very fortunate, Joseph seemed to think. But Lorys was burning up with jealousy. To think that he had missed the very evening when Dorimene should invite him to come in!

Joseph had sat on a divan in the dark with Dorimene. Lorys had turned himself with the picture of it. He had said sweet words to her. He had said sweet words to her. He had said sweet words to her. He had said sweet words to her. He had said sweet words to her.

"You did well, Joseph," Lorys said, "but this is a lock of hair from my lady's chambermaid. I know for I have several locks from that same head. It is a little joke that Dorimene plays now and then. She would like to be dark, you see. I would not regret her, and I would not regret her. I would not regret her. I would not regret her."

And who knows but that when Dorimene learned of this her heart softened a little toward the infatigable Lorys?

At The Playhouses

COLUMBIA Eddie Borden has the role of a well-meaning gambler in Norma Talmadge's "The Dove" at the Columbia Theatre. It is a character part and very different from the role he last played, that of the prize fight manager in Buster Keaton's comedy, "Hitting Butler." Like Keaton, Borden was for many years on the vaudeville stage. Borden and Buster Keaton played together in Hammerstein's famous old Victoria Theatre on Forty-Second Street and Broadway.

COLISEUM Eddie Phillips, Universal's popular juvenile "heavy," who appears in "Finders Keepers," Laura La Plante's latest starring vehicle, now showing at the Coliseum Theatre, got his start in pictures by a cleverly devised hoax. The victim of his successful hoax was Mary Pickford. Mary Pickford was looking for good Italian types for a picture she was going to produce in her Hollywood studio. So Eddie wired her producer, Mr. S. J. Ross, that he was just the man that was needed.

CAPITOL Military procedure and discipline marked the production of the British war epic, "Mademoiselle From Armentieres," a Gaiety picture, distributed in Canada by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and which plays at the Capitol Theatre for the last time today. On location in Sussex, England, the entire personnel of the film, including several regiments of British infantry loaned to Gaumont Company by the British Ministry of War, lived under canvas, and reported to mess, work and social activities at the summons on an army bugle. The star attractions include Hiss and Dorey, two clever banjo artists, Audrey Anderson, soprano, a girl with a million-dollar personality, in song selections, and MacDonald and McConn, a couple of song and dance artists. The Capitol also introduces this week to Victorians, Jack Reid, the new singing M.C.

DOMINION Leroy Mason, who plays the role of "Jorge," a gypsy lover, Dolores Del Rio in the United Artists picture "Revenge," is the new type of screen leading man. According to Hollywood's fashion dictators on human artists for the screen, the "blacksmith" type leading man is now in favor and the girls favor him also. Mason is indeed a blacksmith type leading man. He is under a long term contract to Edwin Carewe, producer-director of "Revenge," now at the Dominion Theatre.

PLAYHOUSE "The Head Man" is another fun master-piece from the pen of Harry Leon Wilson, converted to the silver screen, which makes excellent entertainment. Its fiction title was "The Boss of Little Arcady." First National's adaptation of the novel is now playing at the Playhouse Theatre with Charlie Murray in the title role.

ous, heads for his home and the wife whom he loves devotedly. Though he does not know it, his wife, on the grounds of his mental condition, has divorced him, and her wedding to another man, whom she obviously loves, is only a week away. Fairfield's daughter, Sydney, an ultra-modern young lady even for 1932, is engaged to a personable young man with a deep interest in eugenics. She and her fiancée are drawn into the tangled web of this five-act drama. Out of this five-act drama, Miss Clemence Dane, the noted British novelist and playwright, wrote "A Bill of Divorcement," hailed by New York and London critics as the most powerful of post-war dramas, and a success which had exceptionally long runs in both cities. It is the play which the young London star, Gordon McLeod, and his English company will present for the last half of their week's engagement at the Royal.

Elsa Alsen Shows Artistic Abilities in Domestic Matters

The pursuit of an artistic career may go hand in hand with the cultivation of domestic talents, according to Elsa Alsen, dramatic soprano who will be heard at the First Baptist Church on Wednesday, November 28. Mme. Alsen is pre-eminently the household artist and her accomplishments as a skilful cook are well known to her intimate friends. On the occasion of her debut with the Chicago Opera in the arduous role of Iolande, this singer entertained her friends in her apartment after the performance with a special dish concocted with her own hands. As a hostess, Elsa Alsen is recognized as an adept at making the rare delicacies that the sets before her guests. In addition to cooking, Mme. Alsen finds an outlet for her domestic gifts in interior decoration, and her apartment is a model of what a house should really be. She is an authority on English and colonial furniture, and in her spare moments can be found frequently at auctions and private sales inspecting the offerings with the eye of a connoisseur.

Trick 1.—Declarer goes over with Dummy's Ace of Diamonds to establish top Hearts immediately for needed discards. He anticipates the probable loss of two Club tricks if West should win with the King of Diamonds and return a Club.

Trick 2.—While West could not accurately determine the location of the Queen of Hearts, he places it as probably with Declarer, since it is not held by him. METHODS OF COOKING

Frying is the most unsuitable method of cooking, since it causes the food to be much more difficult to digest. Butter, contrary to popular notions, is a most unsuitable medium for frying, because it becomes separated at extremely low temperature. Olive oil, cottonseed oil, and corn oil are preferable. The fat should be hot enough to immediately coagulate the outer portion of the food immersed so that the fat does not penetrate into the food. Frying in shallow pans is not as satisfactory as frying in deep pans, because when the pans are not deep enough, the food and fats are scorched and mixed in indigestible conglomeration.

Baking is a process of cooking food in the dry heat of an oven. Great temperatures are in this way possible, but the interior of moist foods will scarcely ever reach the boiling point. Baked foods are drier than boiled foods, and some dehydrization takes place in the exterior parts of all baked starchy foods.

Baking is a wholesome method of preparing any food even those which you might not ordinarily think of as being baked such as carrots, beets, cauliflower, string beans, peaches and celery. The larger and more solid foods may simply be placed in the oven with a pan underneath to catch the drip.

plings, but the small leaf vegetables should be placed in a baking pan with a cover on to maintain their moisture. Many different vegetables may be combined in this manner.

Roasting, broiling and grilling are practically the same processes and consist in cooking food by direct radiation in an unconfined atmosphere. Roasting is the term used for a large joint. Broiling and grilling are terms applied to comparatively small pieces of meat. These three processes aim at quickly coagulating the surface of the meat so that most of the juices are retained, and those which escape carry the meat gravy used for basting or pouring over the roast to prevent drying, and to more uniformly distribute the heat. Because of the high temperature on the surface of the meat, a peculiar tasty substance is produced which gives the delightful flavor to the roast meat. Overcooked meat gives a disagreeable flavor because of scorching.

Braising is a process of cooking resembling both boiling and baking. The meat is first browned by searing, similar to that of broiling, after which it is covered with a close fitting lid to produce a moist steam. Braising is an economical and tasty method of cooking meat since all of the food value is retained by the covered process and the flavor is enhanced by the grilling. This process is of particular value in cooking tough meat.

The fireless cooker offers another fine method of cooking food because it maintains a temperature below the boiling point. The toughest old rooster dropped into boiling water for about five minutes to coagulate the surface proteins, and then dropped into a fireless cooker and allowed to stand overnight will be found to have a delicious flavor and the meat will be as tender as the tenderest of broilers, falling apart at the touch of a fork.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM ACUTE

CLAIM NANAIMO TAXPAYERS UNABLE TO OBTAIN WORK

Council Accepts Invitation to Attend Unveiling Ceremony at Up-Island City

NANAIMO, Nov. 20.—The City Council held its regular meeting last evening. Much discussion was held on unemployment, of numerous men in the city who, for a long term of years, have been taxpayers and who have now reached the ages of between forty-five and sixty years. It was brought up by Alderman Rennie, who referred to the fact that some time ago he had introduced a resolution which passed to the effect that the council do all in its power to encourage new industries and help industries already established. The motion had included the proposal to interview employers of labor here with a view to securing employment for taxpayers whenever possible. This motion, he said, had not gone very far, and today it was possible to see men who helped to build the city up by paying taxes here for many years and who, he said, really owned the city, standing on street corners unable to obtain work. He moved, therefore, that an appeal be made by the council to employers of labor to give these men consideration.

The motion was seconded by Alderman Hart. He stated that the situation was coming to a crisis; men were asking the city for work, and the time and old-timers were being thrown in the dirt heap. Alderman Smith thought the move was in the wrong direction. If a man had worked until he was sixty in the mine he should receive remuneration and not more work. He thought the council should go to the Board of Compensation and endeavor to have the age limit reduced for receiving assistance.

Replying to this, Alderman Rennie said that unfortunately coal mines did not superannuate their employees as did some concerns and, as far as going to the Government was concerned, it would take too long and they must remember that the "horse was starting while the grass was growing."

Mayor Busby said it was a question that must be handled carefully. Alderman Ironside agreed, reminding the council that no company or employer of labor could be dictated to as to whom he or they should employ and he moved in amendment that His Worship and Alderman

Entertainment At Cobble Hill Will Aid Scouts

THE annual entertainment and dance in aid of the Boy Scouts will be held in the Cobble Hill Hall on Friday. The programme is in the capable hands of the Scout Committee, Messrs. M. E. West, Molesworth and Pawdry. Among the items will be a concert by Mr. F. Merryfield, known as the Cornish Wizard; Professor W. Farmer's Punch and Judy show, costume dances by Miss Frances Merryfield, songs by Mr. W. Farmer and a "concentration act" by Miss Violet Merryfield. Refreshment arrangements are in the hands of the Women's Institute. The concert will be from 8 to 10 and there will be dancing from 10 till 2.

Cavalry, secretary of the finance committee, be appointed as a committee to interview all employers of labor in this vicinity and put the case to them as clearly and strongly as possible. Following further discussion the suggestion of Alderman Ironside was adopted.

On behalf of the Native Sons, Post No. 3, E. H. Gough wrote asking permission to hold a public ceremony on Dallas Square on November 27, and inviting the council to attend. The letter explained that on this occasion the ceremony of unveiling the cairn on Douglas Square, which had been erected to commemorate the discovery of coal on Vancouver Island, would be carried out. Permission was granted and the council will attend the ceremony.

Great Central Lake Junior Red Cross Has Enjoyable Party

A very successful party was held by the Great Central Junior Red Cross, "The Nightingales," on Friday when the following programme was enjoyed: "Sunbonnet Sally and Overall Jim," duet by Marion Butler and Mae Taylor; "An Old-Fashioned Garden," duet by Miss Allen Robertson and Miss Georgia McConough; "A Frolic," song and dance by small girls; "Mother Goose's Party," by all the school children. This was followed by games for the children till 10 o'clock, when coffee, sandwiches, cake and ice cream were served, followed by dancing.

The large baby doll kindly donated by Mrs. Parks, which the Red Cross has been raffling, was won by Mrs. Mann, who very kindly gave it back to the Red Cross to be sent to the Soldiers as a Christmas gift. A collection was taken, which resulted in over $25.

The concert and party were under the direction and management of Mrs. Allen Robertson, director, and also much credit is due the Red Cross Juniors, who worked hard and acquitted themselves with great credit. Prizes in the Mother Goose costumes were awarded to Miss Marion Butler as Bo-Peep, best girl, and Master Floyd Tyler as Aladdin, best boy.

Burgess Bedtime Stories A Joyous Fright

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Rusty the Fox Squirrel, hiding in the deserted home of Johnny Chuck, was becoming more and more convinced that Reddy Fox really had gone away. No more he had heard the faint barking of Reddy, as if he were a long way off, had Rusty heard a sound to indicate that Reddy was anywhere around.

"He must have gone away," said Rusty to himself. "I don't believe that he would have patience enough to keep hidden all this time. No, sir, I don't believe he would have patience enough."

Which shows how little Rusty really knew Reddy Fox. Reddy was hiding right within two jumps of the back entrance or the front entrance to that Chuck house in which Rusty was hiding. Not only was he there, but he intended to stay there for the rest of the day if necessary. Reddy has no lack of patience when there is a good dinner to be obtained. How Reddy would have chuckled could he have known what Rusty's thoughts were. Things were working just exactly as he had hoped they would.

Rusty was so intent on watching those two entrances that for once he failed to keep watch elsewhere. So he didn't see Bowser the Hound trotting across the Green Meadows. He didn't see Bowser until suddenly Bowser stepped out of the bushes along the old fence almost in front of the front entrance to that Chuck house. Bowser saw at once that some fresh digging had been going on there. He didn't see Reddy lying flat on the grass and bushes. He walked straight up to that hole and gave a mighty sniff.

Now, just at the very instant that Bowser sniffed, Rusty the Fox Squirrel had started to come out. He had made up his mind that the way was clear. So he was just making ready to poke his head out when Bowser thrust his nose in and sniffed. If there had been room, Rusty certainly would have fallen over backward. Never had he had a worse fright. It sent cold shivers all over him. At first he couldn't think what it meant. He couldn't believe that Reddy Fox could sniff like that. But it was only for a moment that he was in doubt. Then he heard the great deep voice of Bowser the Hound as Bowser picked up the trail of Reddy Fox.

Such a load of anxiety as Rusty the Fox Squirrel dropped right then and there. Faintly he could hear that great voice, and all the time it was growing fainter. That meant that Reddy Fox was running and Bowser was running after him, baying as only Bowser can. Rusty was as joyous now as he had been frightened just a moment before. He rushed up the front hall, and without hesitating an instant, he poked his head outside. Then he raced over to the fence, climbed the fence post and sat on top of it. There he could see, far over toward the Old Pasture was a red spot and it was moving very fast. He knew it to be

BIG AIR MEET FOR DECEMBER

PIONEERS OF AVIATION TO BE HONORED DURING TWO-WEEK CONFERENCE

Delegates Invited From Fifty-Four Nations by President Calvin Coolidge

By JOSEPH S. ECKERTON (Copyright, 1928, by the North American Newspaper Alliance)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The aviation world will honor its most noted pioneers in a two weeks' pilgrimage next month in connection with the first international civil aeronautics conference, called by President Coolidge to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first flight in a motor-driven airplane.

Details of the programme, announced here, indicate that the event will mark an era in the development of commercial aviation in this country and abroad. Through the State Department, invitations have been extended to fifty-four nations and practically all of them will be represented by delegates.

The delegates will be met on shipboard and transported by air and rail to Chicago for the International Aeronautics Exposition, December 1 to 9. Weather permitting, the delegates will be flown from Cleveland to Chicago in a fleet of multi-motored planes brought together for the purpose from all parts of the country. December 7 has been designated for special entertainment of the visitors at Chicago.

TO FLY TO DAYTON

The delegates will be flown to Dayton on December 8 or 9, and will participate in the civic celebration of the first flight of the Wright brothers. Entraining for Washington, the visitors will arrive here on December 11, registering that afternoon for the conference, the opening plenary session of which will be held the morning of December 12. Morning and afternoon sessions will be held for three consecutive days.

AIR CIRCUS PLANNED

The Army, Navy and Marine Corps will stage an air circus at the Washington flying fields on December 13, and the delegates will inspect the test laboratories at the Bureau of Standards. That evening they will leave Washington by boat for Langley Field, Va., to inspect the Langley Memorial Aeronautical Laboratories on Sunday, December 16. The trip to Kitty Hawk, N.C., will be made by boat and bus on December 17, in time for the unveiling of two monuments commemorating the first flight of the Wright brothers on December 17, 1903.

One of the monuments is to be erected by the United States Government at Kill Devil Hills, and the other by the National Aeronautic Association on the spot from which the first flight was made.

The delegates will be returned to Washington before the disbanding. The Washington conference will present the first opportunity for a comprehensive interchange of views of world authorities on the problems of commercial aviation.

Now, just at the very instant that Bowser sniffed, Rusty the Fox Squirrel had started to come out. He had made up his mind that the way was clear. So he was just making ready to poke his head out when Bowser thrust his nose in and sniffed. If there had been room, Rusty certainly would have fallen over backward. Never had he had a worse fright. It sent cold shivers all over him. At first he couldn't think what it meant. He couldn't believe that Reddy Fox could sniff like that. But it was only for a moment that he was in doubt. Then he heard the great deep voice of Bowser the Hound as Bowser picked up the trail of Reddy Fox.

Such a load of anxiety as Rusty the Fox Squirrel dropped right then and there. Faintly he could hear that great voice, and all the time it was growing fainter. That meant that Reddy Fox was running and Bowser was running after him, baying as only Bowser can. Rusty was as joyous now as he had been frightened just a moment before. He rushed up the front hall, and without hesitating an instant, he poked his head outside. Then he raced over to the fence, climbed the fence post and sat on top of it. There he could see, far over toward the Old Pasture was a red spot and it was moving very fast. He knew it to be

Rusty did a little dance of joy on the fence post

Rusty the Fox Squirrel, hiding in the deserted home of Johnny Chuck, was becoming more and more convinced that Reddy Fox really had gone away. No more he had heard the faint barking of Reddy, as if he were a long way off, had Rusty heard a sound to indicate that Reddy was anywhere around.

"He must have gone away," said Rusty to himself. "I don't believe that he would have patience enough to keep hidden all this time. No, sir, I don't believe he would have patience enough."

Which shows how little Rusty really knew Reddy Fox. Reddy was hiding right within two jumps of the back entrance or the front entrance to that Chuck house in which Rusty was hiding. Not only was he there, but he intended to stay there for the rest of the day if necessary. Reddy has no lack of patience when there is a good dinner to be obtained. How Reddy would have chuckled could he have known what Rusty's thoughts were. Things were working just exactly as he had hoped they would.

Rusty was so intent on watching those two entrances that for once he failed to keep watch elsewhere. So he didn't see Bowser the Hound trotting across the Green Meadows. He didn't see Bowser until suddenly Bowser stepped out of the bushes along the old fence almost in front of the front entrance to that Chuck house. Bowser saw at once that some fresh digging had been going on there. He didn't see Reddy lying flat on the grass and bushes. He walked straight up to that hole and gave a mighty sniff.

TURNS TABLES ON KIDNAPPERS

How tables were turned on political kidnapers in the recent campaign to elect a rector for Glasgow, Scotland, University, has leaked out. A Liberal high official was kidnapped by his opponents and imprisoned on an island in Loch Ard. While his four guards were asleep he crawled out of the hut and, clad only in pajamas, scurried to the mainland on the only boat in the island, thus leaving his captors marooned. He trudged three miles, and by taking a bus for the rest of the journey created a sensation when he made an unexpected appearance at headquarters.

Platinum wedding rings are popular because they last longer than gold. But the old-fashioned gold ones would outlast many modern marriages.

ARRAN FIRTH HARD ASHORE OFF TEXADA

Crew of Frank Waterhouse
Freighter Escapes to Tide-
Washed Rocks as Ship
Piles Up at End of Island

VESSEL IS NOW IN SERIOUS SITUATION

VANCOUVER, Nov. 20.—Driven on the rocks at Point Upwood, south end of Texada Island, shortly after midnight Monday, the motorship Arran Firth, owned by Frank Waterhouse & Company of Canada, Limited, is reported to be in a precarious condition.

The tugboat Hawser, owned by Hopkins Brothers Towing Company, sighted the SOS flares of the distressed vessel and proceeded through an easterly gale to assist. She is still standing by.

Officers and crew of the Arran Firth escaped to the tide-washed rocks and eventually to shore, where they are being cared for.

Princess Maquinna for West Coast Point will sail one day later, leaving Victoria Thursday, November 22, at 11 p.m.

The ship, is now at Pender Harbor, awaiting instructions.

The Arran Firth, laden full with a general cargo for Rivers Inlet and way ports, sailed from Vancouver at 8:30 p.m. Monday, her first scheduled call being Powell River. Apparently she was going up the inside passage to get shelter from the easterly gale when she struck. No details of the accident have been received.

The Vancouver Drydock & Salvage Company, Limited, has dispatched a salvage outfit to the scene, and one of the tugboats of Pacific (Coyle) Navigation Company, Limited, has also gone to the motorship's aid.

The Arran Firth is a steel vessel, built in 1921 at South Shields and brought out here four years ago by P. Waterhouse & Company for coastal work. She is 138 feet long, 23 feet beam and 9.7 feet depth.

STARBOARD LIST DELAYS INDIE OFF CANAL ZONE

PANAMA, Nov. 20.—The freighter Indio, of the Canadian Transport Company, bound from Vancouver to Baltimore, stopped at Balboa yesterday to rectify a list to starboard.

The list was believed to have been caused when water tanks on the port side were emptied and the starboard pumps did not work. The ship carried lumber.

The motorship was at Victoria on October 30 to load her lumber cargo.
